Tanith has a background in media and health regulation. She previously worked for a state regulatory body where she was involved in the dispute resolution and investigation of complaints against unregistered and registered health practitioners and health facilities in NSW.

“I understand that health practitioners work hard to maintain appropriate standards and provide services to clients. Complaints and issues of professional liability, as they arise, can have a real effect on the lives of an individual practitioner.”

“I was drawn to Barry Nilsson for its positive culture and reputation for delivering high quality work.”

Tanith has a Bachelor of Arts in Communication (Journalism) / Bachelor of Laws and a Graduate Certificate in Legal Practice.
